The Center for Industrial Effectiveness (TCIE) at the University at Buffalo is currently seeking a Program Coordinator to lead engagement and outreach with stakeholders including prospective students, businesses, community-based organizations, and regional training providers. The coordinator will be responsible for project management and community engagement for a workforce development program. The successful candidate is an organized self-starter with empathy for people, a passion for project management, and experience managing budgets, all while producing top-quality work serving internal and external clients with a good mix of professionalism and creativity.

Tasks include:

- Plan and manage marketing campaigns and outreach events.
- Provide effective communication and follow-through to project partners, and prospective / enrolled students.
- Work alongside staff and contractors to prepare presentation and marketing materials.
- Develop and deliver marketing and informational emails to prospective and enrolled learners.
- Field inquiries from prospective students.
- Interview prospective and enrolled students to gather information about their backgrounds, employment goals, needs, and progress.
- Arrange, manage, and track wraparound service provision for students.
- Track and report student enrollments, progress, and outcomes.
- Secure quotes for contractors, review vendor bids, and participate in vendor selection.
- Facilitate and process financial transactions.
- Maintain reports, tracking budgets and expenditures.
- Perform other various administrative and project management responsibilities, as needed.
