Job Description

This Program Coordinator position will be instrumental in the implementation of a newly created mobile health unit to support the health and wellbeing of those living primarily in the Seneca-Babcock neighborhood and surrounding WNY Community. This position will be hands-on, balancing both administrative responsibilities and being involved in personal health-centered interactions with our diverse community members.

Primarily stationed at the Seneca-Babcock Community Association, the mobile unit will serve a wide range of about 30,000 constituents in the city of Buffalo. UB will also work to establish partnerships with agencies in Erie and surrounding counties to regularly make the mobile health unit available to low-resourced residents living in both urban and rural areas across Western New York. From the mobile unit (a fleet of 3 vehicles in total), UB health sciences students and faculty will be able to offer health screenings and prevention services, provide referrals to primary care providers and help individuals and families navigate the health care system, from getting connected with health insurance providers
